This museum teach us various kind of volcano, their existence and how to observe the volcano.

This impressive museum is located in a striking white angular structure that resembles a volcano. You'll find exhibits dedicated to Merapi, including a scale model that demonstrates previous eruptions from the 18th century until today, and how they altered the mountain's shape. There are vintage seismometers on display along with a motorbike torched and excavated from molten ash. Included with the film is an earthquake simulation that rumbles through the museum halls.
